NORTH VANCOUVER-Three letters were filed Monday at the preliminary hearing of Vancouver public relations man Al Williamson.

Mr. Williamson is charged with forging and uttering Premier W. A. C. Bennett's signature. The letter, signed W. C. Bennett, is alleged to be in support of U.S. millionaire Harry Stonehill's application for landed immigrant status.

The other two were signed by Williamson and all were sent to Hal Dornan, aide to Prime Minister Pearson.

The letters submitted by the Crown read: The May 4 letter bearing the Bennett signature read: Thanks for your interest in the settlement of our friend

In Canada... "Investment in secondary industries such as he proposed an be of inestinable value to the economy of British Columbia and we are most anxious to see this type of development. I understand his plans have been somewhat delayed due to uncertainty about his future, and hope this can be settled favorably as quickly as possible.

"I hope you are well and enjoying life in Ottawa." * * *

The May 4 letter on Williamson's stationery signed "Al W" read: .

"Just got the enclosed letter which may be useful for the file on our Mr. Stonehill's case.

"This matter is continuing to concern me and as I am getting away to England on May 18 I hope any part of it with which I am directly concerned can be attended to before that date.

"I very much appreciate your extremely kind co-opera-tion and would dearly love it if Babs (Mrs. Williamson) and I and you and Mickey (Mrs. Dornan) could have another eve ning together soon. Unless you are going to be in Montreal on May 18 or 19, however, I don't suppose that can be ar-

(Although prosecutor T. G. Bowen-Colthurst described this is a "covering letter," Mr. Dornan did not say the two May 4 letters arrived in the same envelope and referred to them as separate letters.)

The May 5 letter signed "Al W" read: 'I meant to enclose the Sun's article in my letter yesterday but forgot about it. So here it is. Stonehill had tried to avoid the interview but they told him they had a wire story about him and if he wouldn't see them they'd run it as it was 'without any defence.' "So he met (Vancouver Sun reporter Michael) Cobb and gave the interview. Stonehill was quite upset by it-because of what effect it might have on his position at Oaawa but I don't consider it too bad.

The story of Joe MacInnis:

How a young man can plan to retire with $65,000 cash from London Life

Joe MacInnis, 28, chose a Jubilee policy. It protects his family and can give him double his money back. If you are looking for a profitable investment, read his story below:

HE ABOVE photograph of Joe MacInnis was taken during his working hours. He is Director of Diving Reearch with Ocean System

Joe's goal - as in his earlier work with the Link "Man in Sea" project—is to enable man to live and work deep in the ocean, on the Canadians will have a chance to see this underwater world at Expo '67 in Montreal. Joe is Senior Scientific Advisor to the design consultants for the proposed $2 million "Man and the Oceans"

In a recent interview, he talked about his approach to life insurance and why he chose a London Life policy:

"I try to look at things very objectively, as a scientist should. When I started thinking about insurance. I was thinking mainly of protection for my wife, Cynthia, and our children.

"I'm the first to admit that investments and insurance are a foreign world to me. My field is science. "So, I decided to talk to five or six people who sell life insurance. Eventually, I bought this $50,000 policy from a representative of London Life." Why did he select London Life?

"Well, a couple of reasons. It's an old axiom in our business to get the best man for the job; this is what I've done. The London Life man wouldn't make any sort of recommendation until I told him. practically my life story. As a scientist, this im-ne protection and a good investment "If I die, my wife will receive the $50,000. If I live, I can more than double my money. This came as a surprise to me, but the figures are right here.

"My premium is $64.00 a month. To age 65, I'll pay in a total of about $29,000. But I can get back since I'm leaving my dividends to accumu little over $65,000. That's a pretty good return." (Note: This figure of $65,000 is made up of $27,700 in guaranteed cash value and the balance in accumulated dividends. These dividends are based on the 1965 scale. While they are not guaranteed, London Life has had an outstanding record of dividend payments. Dividends allotted to owners of London Life profit-sharing policies for 1965 exceed $29 million.)

This policy-like all London Life policies-is flexible. It provides three choices when Joe is 65: (a) The premiums can be continued and the savings will keep growing.

(b) The $65,000 or so can be withdrawn as a lump

(c) The savings can be used to purchase an annuity for life or for a set number of years. Joe had one other interesting comment to make:

"Since I'm so wrapped up in my research work, I don't have a lot of time to worry about personal financial problems. "Thave confidence in my London Life representative to the point that I have consulted him on fin matters other than insurance. Mind you, he doesn't always know the answer, but he steers me to an

The experience of Joe MacInnis is not unusual Many men rely on their London Life representative for financial counselling

Whether you're thinking of a $10,000 or $50,000 Jubilee policy, if you buy when you are young and leave your dividends to accumulate, you can double your money before you retire.

down April 26, Finance Minister Gordon's white paper tabled in the Commons Monday could hardly be

Instead of the deficit of $455 milfor the year in his last budget speech, the figure is only $83 millions, the lowest since the 1957-58 fiscal year. The deficit is down 87 per cent from the previous year and is much lower than even the hardiest optimists dared predict several months ago.

There is no doubt that the improvement was largely the result of a generally booming Canadian econdefence spending also made a contri- $479 millions to $15.5 billions. The bution. It is gratifying to note that cost of servicing debt now runs at the rate of increase in government budgetary expenditures was only in a buoyant year such as the last one-third that of budgetary revenues during the year and that Mr. Gordon is able to predict a similar pace for the coming fiscal year.

Mr. Gordon made another prediction—rather an innovation in budget white papers-that "the Canadian" economy as a whole should move forward to new and higher levels years of sharply lowered government of activity in 1965." It will be neces-

For the year just ended, corlions which Mr. Gordon anticipated poration tax revenue was up 19.9 per cent over the previous year and personal income tax revenue jumped by 13 per cent, while sales tax receipts climbed by 26.1 per cent..

Such statistics create a very favorable environment for the Prime Minister if he should decide to call a national election.

On the somewhat less palatable side, the white paper revealed an increase during the past year in the omy, but an 8.3 per cent cut in country's net debt position, up by about $650 millions a year and even one this cost is rapidly approaching 10 per cent of budgetary revenues and forms a major item of our national expenditures.

Eight successive years of budget deficits have pushed the debt to a level where the inescapable interest costs would be very burdensome in

The Creaking Machinery

I INITED STATES POLICY RE- United Nations clause which would garding the United Nations has been coming in for some blunt domestic criticism. The Administration. is accused of being "ambivalent" in its attitude towards the UN's role in Viet Nam, and of having seriously weakened the world body by its poor tactics when faced with a showdown on the matter of Russia's debts for UN policing operations.

As regards Viet Nam, Mr. Johnson's recent broadcast cleared up one aspect. He strongly urged UN Secretary-General U Thant to promote a massive program of aid to Southeast Asia and promised $1 billion of United States funds to help complete it. But in discussing the military situation in Viet Nam there was no mention of United Nations' peace-keeping intervention; the unconditional discussions were apparently designed without any thought of utilizing UN offices. Only a few days earlier, Assistant Secretary Harlan Cleveland had spoken favorably of UN participation both in negotiations and policing, and this had been quickly followed by a State Department denial that UN aid was wanted in either.

not unexpected. Peace talks on a some future matter. strictly bilateral level could still be within the framework of United Nations regional arrangements. But it is noteworthy that the Viet Nam quarrel is one of the few international shooting situations in the past few years which have not resulted in international intervention in the form of UN policing.

In the matter of Article 19-the have required Russia to pay up its delinquent dues or lose its vote in the Assembly-the United States effort "collapsed like a punctured balloon," in the phrase of Republican Senator Aiken.

He felt that Washington had abandoned its tough line and backed away from the test when a compromise was arranged which permitted the Assembly to postpone action until the next session. This weakened both the United States and the United Nations and did nothing to ease the bankruptcy threatened by a deficit of $110 millions.

The problems of UN assessments must be faced sooner or later, and the American position is less advantageous than it was before the scuttle for shelter. But back of the whole situation a new aspect is now discerned. Observers believe that Washington has come to recognize that under similar circumstances it would have reacted in the same way as Russia, to the assessment for Congo policing costs, and there is the further realization that the many new, small states which now have a vote in the Assembly could con-ceivably put the United States in an Poor, silly, rich Mr. Rushworth! The latter attitude, of course, was equally unacceptable position on

> With this in mind, the United States is believed to be less inclined to force the issue with Russia or France or the other nations which are behind in their payments. Some new formula for financing police operations may be in the making. One certainly is required, for the UN Assembly has been rendered barren by the continuing stalemate.

A Triumph Over Disease

TO MANY PERSONS OF MIDdle age or more it comes as something of a surprise to realize that Salk vaccine has been used in a successful campaign against polio for 10 years.

The once dread summertime killer and crippler, if not eliminated, has been brought under control to such a degree that only 121 cases were reported in the United States last year. In the 40 years before the advent of the Salk vaccine, the American death toll from the virus was 57,000, and 300,000 were crippled.

Standing in isolation, the achievement of Jonas Salk and those who worked with him is a medical triumph of the first order. But it is more than that. It is a stimulant to other scientists.

In laboratories and in clinics in various parts of the world, researchers are working now to conquer other diseases that have been disabling or lethal. Theirs is an exhausting task. Yet, on this 10th anniversary of the day when Salk vaccine was proved, they may hope for the eventual success of the parallel work they now carry on.

sinner, this confession that Britain has a color problem. It is only because the numbers are smaller that it is not as serious as that of the United States. The British—or the Anglo-Saxons—have always been bad mixers. The old Empire was run on a principle of racial exclusivwhich despite the integrity of rulers, has left a legacy of bitterness unknown in less efficient, less well-meaning and more tolerant imperialisms. The same deep-seated proconsular exclusivity can be found today in the mean back-streets of British industrial towns.

When, after the war, the British Em-pire turned itself slowly, and painfully and proudly into the British Commonwealth, it maintained the principle of a weath, it maintained the principle of a common citizenship, which allowed all the citizens of the Commonwealth to enter and work in Britain and, after a year's residence, to vote. But the Commonwealth Immigration Act put a stop.

To the white Commonwealth, little change was apparent. Australian and New Zealanders and Canadians can still come and work almost as freely as before. The pinch was felt by the colored members.

Chief Clients

Two countries, both poor, both over-populated, Pakistan and the West Indies —which is not of course technically a single nation—were the chief clients. With the United States virtually closed to them, Britain alone seemed to offer the gold-paved streets. The act was condemned by liberal opinion as a piece of racial

And Jane Austen does not even bother to tell us whether the deceived husband then consoled himself by calling in the fashionable Humphrey Repton to give Sother-ton Court's sternly regular 18th century park and gardens a new, more modish, more picturesque disorder.

Symbols of Hope

Yet at this season, the pathetic figure of Rushworth the improver, ever dis-satisfied but ever hopeful, somehow haunts one's thoughts. For this is the season when Viet Nam and Selma, the problems of the dollar and of sterling, ven the need to pay income tax are driven from the mind by heavenly visions of plantain lilies-which you will call funkias if you are an old-fashioned but serious gardener, but will refer to hostas if you are really in the horticultural swim.

It is always the same story. In the area at the end of the garden, heavily shaded by the big magnolias and the splendidly columnar stewartias, new start has been made after optimistic new start. Last time it was a planting of tiarellastarflower of the woods-with wild ginger of both sorts and tall ferns to give height and contrast.

But bad drainage or fungus or one of the other countless enemies of gardeners reduced the new planting to the status of a horticultural slum. So now it is to be hostas—hostas white-veined, hostas white-rimmed, hostas miniature and giant, even hostas of an improbable blue-glaucous color. It is an English idea, vegetable symphony, with the hosta leaf-form as its continuing theme. But

Wait and Pray

God knows it is the only po swer. The hostas are in the ground now. The surviving starflowers are replanted under the camellias, where they look much more contented. But for the hostas whose clumps already show the first thick, whitish thumbs of growth above the raked earth, one can only wait and pray until their fate is decided by the capricious Providence that presides over all gardens.

This year, on the whole, this remote. unknowable yet presiding Providence has been kinder than usual. The little Ger-mander hedges along the walks have been killed back to the root. It was that day, no doubt, when it first rained and then froze hard, thus breaking the bark of the fragile stems. So miniature box must be put in, since it is too tedious to wait, every third year, for the Germander to come up again from nothing at all.

But the Daphne Odora positively sailed through the winter in its sheltered place, and it is now in full bloom perfuming the whole street with a sweet lemony sceni that the most highly paid professional in Paris could never imitate. The camellias have done so well that their display is close to vulgar—great flowers as big as butter plates, of rose pink, and pinkish red, and crimson, and white pink-

Good Year for Box

The box has had a good year, too. No bush lacks the tiny bead-like buds that are the promises of new growth; and the strange, rare, sport, the box plant of growth on it already. It seems to be ramping up its wall in the manner of an enthusiastic arboreal cat-burglar. Even the turtle in the walled moss garden appears to have passed an agreeable winter, if one may judge by its awakening appe-

But the spirit of Mr. Rushworth-the spirit of improving discontent-nonethe less hovers over the spring-drunk scene giant wild cherries from Japan, with their drifts of whitish-pink blossom of an almost unearthly delicacy, may be all very well in their way. But why, in this damnable climate, cannot we grow Eucryphia, which is said to be the beautiful small tree in the world? Perhaps in tubs, with pruning to keep them low, and then in a window in the winter? One can only try. And how about Lilies of the Nile in that bit with ground cover of pretty, faithful Banal Virca? And so the gardener progresses, from spring to spring, from folly to folly, with triumph only crowning one folly in every three or four-which is enough.

The figures are small, but the problem aggravated by the fact that the colored in Britain-as elsewhere, and for the same sad reasons-tend to be concen They could hardly be dispensed with now in the hospitals and public transport. Not to put too fine a point on it, they tend to do the dirty work in Britain. But they are resented and suspect in public houses, trades unions, housing estates, dance halls and in those areas set aside for the mating preliminaries of young people.

The color problem has now become sort of semi-secret issue in British politics. The Labor government, committed while in Opposition to the extreme liberal position, is in a quandary. They have promised to make the Immigration Act ork, to prevent the most obvious evasions of it. It is known that in Pakistan there has been a large-scale and corrupt traffic in permits. They are also com-mitted to passing an act outlawing discrimination in such areas as housing and jobs. They will set up an apparatus of tribunals and welfare officials to enforce

The party is not easy on the subject. They have both a guilty conscience and a political apprehension of the results of what they are doing. Members in marginal constituencies, especially those in semi-suburban areas outside industrial cities, are unhappy. Mr. Patrick Gordon Walker, who was foreign secretary in the Labor government, lost his election at Smethwick in just such an area be-cause his undistinguished Conservative opponent promised to advocate a total ban on immigration. And members of Parliament from cities like Birmingham with a high colored population, keep their racial liberalism nervously muted

Conservatives Benefit

All this is pure-or impure-gain for the Conservatives. Officially they insist that the racial problem is not a public policy issue. They advocate still stricter controls. Some minor members of the party do speak wildly of the matter, and there is a clear advantage for them in the marginal constituencies because they are thought to be anti-black. Sir Alec Douglas-Home, their leader, has been careful to say nothing definite in the issue and immigration have become in distinguishable

It is not a pleasant subject. The libera. case is being made more difficult by the new James Baldwin sort of militantism of some of the colored leaders. But then it is easier in Britain than America to justify illiberalism: "If they dislike it here so much why don't they go home?"

There are isolated incidents. Milk bottles thrown at night at the door of an Indian doctor. Innumerable landladies refusing beds to colored suppliants. Dirty letters to a West Indian elected as a Labor Party constituency leader. Fights outside public houses at closing time. A murder or two that can only be explained by the fact that the victim was black. Whole streets uniting to protest the acceptance of a colored tenant. The press the educated opinion, is overwhelmingly on the side of integration.

But this is a grass-roots, working class, unsophisticated, original sin preju dice. No legislation can be thought of to

from Singapore

AS the aging Communist leaders in Peking become ever more afraid that the younger generation may betray their aggressive, sectarian revolution and settle for a welfare state with pork twice a week, the suspected champions of "poisonous bourgeois tendencies" find themselves under sustained attack.

After six months of persistent contumely, the Chinese Communist Press is still castigating Comrade Feng Ting, who was unwise enough, for example, to commit his private thoughts to paper in a work called "The Communist View of Life.' Feng Ting describes commun-ism as the "correct" approach to existence, but he stands condemned for warning his readers that since life has to be lived they must be practical, acquire skills, work hard, and so achieve within the framework of society their individual share of success and happi-

Pragmatic Crime

He has therefore committed the heinous crime of echoing the pragmatists who consider China's economic prosperity more important than loyalty to inflexible Communist theory. Chastened and self-righteous technicians, coached in the official line, write to the newspapers explaining how his book encouraged them to become "expert" rather than "red," to concentrate only on their profession during the day, to pursue personal pleasure in their spare time rather than cultivate a taste for even ing political classes, to wear smart clothes and spend most of their money on good food. Only slowly did they recover from the virus, !earn the joys of leisure-hour indoctrination, of physical labor on the factory floor, of making do with old denim suits and living in dormitories side by side with greasestained workers.

But in their anxiety to discourage the emergence of an apolitical class of dili-gent, competent, white-collar technicians, the Communists will have to make sure that they are not simply encouraging the emergence of a class of pseudo-socialist slackbrains and slobs

Priggish

The young foreman who dresses himself up sprucely in a good suit, a woollen scarf and leather shoes, and takes a present of cakes and other goodies back to his home village for his parents is dangerously in the wrong. "You have forgotten your origins" his father greets him (according to a Chinese newspaper more weighted with leaden - footed morality than any Aesop fable). "None of our family for three generations has worn clothes like that.'

The foreman retorts that none of them has eaten properly either: "Now we are in a new society and live a happy life, why shouldn't we eat more, dress a little better?" But this commendable answer is anathema to the killjoys, and "creates a very bad impression."

Official exhortations to economize and "wipe out bourgeois ideology" give not only the mentally lazy but also the mean splendid political motives for their actions, "The father of certain other boys is really blessed," a parent tells his son pointedly. "His children send him 60 yuan (about £10) each month in remittances." The embarrassed son is delighted to discover that this "blessed' neighbor is a former landlord, After studying Mao Tse-tung's works carefully, he is able to decide that in future filial obligations must be re-examined in the light of the class struggle. The old folk are quite capable, in their dialectical dotage, of using money given to them by their offspring to rebel lution, or corrupt the cadres. As a good "successor," one keep it in one's purse. one should perhaps

Dangerously Wrong

Meanwhile, a somewhat priggish correspondence in the press reveals how the business of stripping the Chinese of their religions, their traditions, their customs, their occasional extravagance and their unhealthy bourgeois outlook goes forward. A shower of supporting letters and editorial comments rewards the gentle-man who writes indignantly in a Cantonese paper: "The moment I stepped through the door of the Kai Yuan temple on Sunday, I was brought up short by a disgusting sight." It was a crone telling a child to kneel before the Buddhist images. "Such old women," he complains, "are still obsessed by the vestiges of feudal and capitalist thinking. But to make children grow into revolutionary successors, we must educate them exclusively in proletarian thought

The writer is nevertheless pounced upon by the experts for saying that children are like a blank sheet of paper which . . . can be daubed with old and filthy things." their minds are not blank and innocent, it is argued in Peking, if they have been brought up by superstitious, bourgeois parents or wilful deviationists. You are never too young to be "rectified."

"Hung Pao" — traditional presents of money in little red envelopes — are the way of religious tolerance. During the recent Spring Festival the tots who normally look eagerly to their elders for these seasonal gifts were warned to reject them as an "old feudal custom.

Killing Festive Tradition

This year China's millions were advised not to paste up the traditional red strips of paper on their doors inscribed with the customary couplets involving Health, Wealth and Happiness. They were fold instead to stick on their doorsteps and walls such festive phrases as "Promote proletarian ideology, form new styles of revolutionary work.

This is an earnest, often laudable ways self-righteous society that should not repel simply because it baffles. But it is also a disconcertingly prissy pattern for living in which even a joke must be carefully dissected for its class content before anyone laughs. Is it making fun of the peasants? Is it slyly advocating the comfortable life of the bourgeois? Or is it that dreariest jest of all - the Chinese Communist conception of good

Gerald Waring 'Nails in Dief's Coffin'

インストライントル・スティー・ストランストライント

OTTAWA - The unwillingness of the majortry opposition to unite and defeat the Liberal government, as demonstrated in the Commons twice last week, is another nail in the political coffin of John Diefenbaker

Quite a few such nails have been ham mered home lately. Items * The tiny majority with which Mr. Diefenbaker carried his caucus in February to ride ut the Quebec revolt;

* The gulf between him and Premier arts of Ontario and other Tory premiers well over his opposition to the Fulton-Favreau formula for amending the Constitu-

* The warnings of party bagmen that Tory Ontario won't ante up for an election fund unless Dief quits

* Davie Fulton's decision to return to ral politics, with an unannounced but nonetheless clear intention to be very much available for the leadership:

* The formal abandonment of the Tory by its erstwhile Quebec leader, Leon Balcer, and the grave pronouncement by Egan Chambers, past president of the Progressive Conservative Association, that this means the end of the Tories as a national party.

One of the things that has propped up Mr Diefenbaker, along with his indomitable will and his Prairie worshippers, has been the rehas taken every opportunity to encourage. The nence of an election fanciful imminence, as it proved in every case gave pause to Tories who want to dump Dief. Even they agree that he is better than no leader at all, and they were loath to risk being caught by an election in the middle of a leadership change.

Mr. Diefenbaker still tries to see an election behind every tree, but his warning gets decreasing attention. Even if one disbelieved Prime Minister Pearson's assurance to the House late last month that he does not contemplate an election this year, the Throne Speech is far from being the "election mani-lesto" that Mr. Diefenbaker labelled it. Rather, it is a program dedicating Parliament to a year of sustained hard work

The political climate already has changed since the new session started. The government 'scandals" are diminishing as a political factor. The government's image is improving on the basis of its housecleaning and its new program. And Mr. Diefenbaker's hold on his office and his party is becoming more tenuous.

But this does not get the Conservative party off the hook. The Tories need a new leader acceptable to the Quebec Conservatives who will not, by his very act of succeeding Diefenbaker, alienate Conservatives in the Prairies and the Maritimes. The consequences of dumping Dief are about as grave as those of keep ing him, and until the Conservatives resolve their dilemma and give the nation an accept able alternative to the Pearson government the whole country, not just the Tory party, will he the poorer

Rather than seem dentified with those who describe them as aggressors. most of us are naturally tempted to give blanket approval to their Viet Nam policy

That the Americans are not aggressors but are, on the contrary, resisting Communist aggression is evident to all but eranky few; and it is also widely appreciated that they are fighting not for them-selves or South Viet Nam alone but to safeguard the independence of many other countries. Their motives are above reproach. But in politics, as in private life, it is never enough to be well-meaning. Policy has to be realistic and effective, as well as right-

False Analogy

What bothers me, talking to Americans about Viet Nam, is their apparent belief that they are dealing with a repeat per-formance of Korea. False historical analogies are a notor ious trap for statesmen, and the analogy between Viet Nam and Korea seems to me dangerously false. Apart from the difference that the Korean war was technically a United Nations operation, whereas the war in Viet Nam has no such status, there are two strictly military differences which stare us in the face.

First, the war in Korea was conventional in the full senwas fought between regular armies and confined to the classic pattern of warfare. In Viet Nam, however, the enemy is not organized in regular formations, and there is no front line. The war now being waged against the Americans and their allies is a guerrilla war to which the campaigns in Korea-is not a peninsula. In Korea, even a guerrilla war would be less difficult to cope with, because the enemy's supply problem would be acute, the Americans having command of the sea. In South Viet Nam, the partisans can reinforced and replenished by land across territory which gives them plenty of protec-tion against air reconnais-sance and air attack. And even if North Viet Nam were to be bombed into an act of token submission, the Vietcong would not be denied the means to carry on the struggle. The Russians or the Chinese would see to that.

For the Chinese, what is now happening in and on account of Viet Nam is heavensent. They are hoping to witness the simultaneous dis-comfiture of both their principal antagonists-the United States and the Soviet Union. If these two powers are brought into armed conflict, so much the better. The growing awareness of common in-terest between Russia and the West will then suffer a crip-pling blow. If, on the other hand, the Russians do not intervene in support of North Viet Nam, they will lose face throughout the Communist world, and especially in Afro-Asia. The Chinese will then have won an easy victory at their expense.

It is idle, therefore, to expect a rough-and-ready military solution, as in Korea, if only the Americans maintain their effort and turn a deaf ear to doubting Thomases. There must be no question of abandoning South Viet Nam; on that point the Americans are entirely right and their critics entirely wrong. But a continuation of the war with out a determined search for a political solution will cost Americans heavily in blood, treasure, and reputation, while the Chinese at least will reap nothing but advantage.

Only By Politics

Through politics alone can a solution be found. The war in Viet Nam is of the inconclusive sort, which can be brought to an end only by external political decisions. One such would be an alignment the Russians and the Americans against the Chinese. This may come about one day-but not yet. The only other practical course is for the Americans to reach an understanding with the Chinese who, with their overwhelming forces, are in a position to control the Viet Cong one way or the other. At present, the U.S. government is prevented by doctrinaire obsession from recognizing Red China or giv-ing it any material inducement to desist from aggresion and subversion. Americans, as a result of their own rigid policy, hold no sanctions for good behavior against the Chinese

ON THE TIMES

The Unscientific Approach

MAKING coffee," announced the small redhead as he stirred garden dirt into a can half full of water. "You want some, Nana" said 👺 No thank you. Nana, gazing a little for-lornly at the splendid mud he had plastered wetly down his clothes from chin to boot toes. "And please don't dig there any

'Why?" asked the red-

"Because," he was told, "I've planted seeds there."

Why?" he asked again Stott and received a very elementary lecture on ger mination and growth, ending with the phrase, 'and that's how the flowers come 'Why, Nana?" he asked a third time

"Why what?" came back the query

"Why can't I dig here?".
The reply was abrupt: "Because I said not to." No more of this nonsense about planting the seeds of botany in the little mind. So the Junior excavator moved off to another part of the garden where the soil made just as good

The small redhead is not yet seized with the scientific approach. His mind runs to more practical things, like making simulated bever-ages from an injudicious mixture of diet and cold water

Since I don't wash his mud-caked clothes after such operations I can afford to be de tached in my considerations, and a little tolerant of his disinclination to accept simplified botany. I can afford to be tolerant for another reason. To date I haven't been able to catch on to scientific approach myself. There's a streak of the practical in me that is an obstacle I keep wanting to know what research peopl are trying to do - what application they will bring to their discoveries when, or if, they make them. This, it seems, is the wrong way to look at things. ago I visited a very famous laboratory in Oxford. In one part of it a young man of close relationship was involved with a senior and a junior in an experiment in solic state physics. Nobody has yet found time, or un to the time a simple enough vocabulary, to explain under- Mickey Finn

By ART STOTT

But in the room used by the three scientists was a marvelous piece of equipment, or a collection of pieces of equipment. It looked like those Goldberg machines featured in old Saturday Evening Post cartoons. The only thing I recognized in it, apart from glass tubing and some retorts, was a football bladder that hung dispiritedly from a jet.

'What does it do?'' I asked.

The scientists looked at me a little in credulously and asked what I meant. So I elaborated: "When you get this thing working. what will it accomplish? What will it produce? What use can be made of what it does?

They looked a little more incredulous and explained that the contraption didn't have do anything. They were trying to expand a certain field of knowledge. Maybe they would find out something from the experiment. If they did; then some years hence somebody might find a practical use for what they had wasn't the idea. They were after knowledge.

I thanked them very kindly and went out the same door where in I went.

More recently I listened to a distinguished British scientist now working in chemistry University of British Columbia. It was a matter of considerable moment in his field when he was able to make a compound of a rare gas-something which the textbooks had previously said could not be done.

The scientist explained the process which led to his accomplishment. When he had finished his explanation, he made a slight gesture to people like me who want to know application can be made of the results of such experiments.

At the same time, despite occasional chauvinistic outbursts which put panie into the hearts of Greek Cypriots, the Turkish government genuinely wants a further period of peace in Cyprus-if only for internal political reasons

If, in addition, talks could be got going with Greece's Pa pandreou government - which Mr. Inonu never achieved this could be a valuable bonus point on the eve of the autumn elections which now overshadow every aspect of Tur-

The main difference between the new government and the last may show up in the day-to-day handling of the Cyprus crisis, rather than in maters of principle. First, Mr. Urguplu's administration is not wing any tendency to run to the Americans for help whenever tension on the island rises. In the past two weeks Washington has not been able to play a restraining role as it did last year and Ameri-can diplomats are seriously

Army Pressure Secondly, if a major "Cuba-tyle confrontation arose such as occurred last August almost certainly the army would determine Turkish policy and decide on its action. At various moments last year Mr. Inonu was able to resist army pressure by dint of his personal prestige. Neither Mr. Urguplu, nor his vicorous young lieutenant. Mr. Suleiman Demirel (many regard him as the main driv ng force behind the new set up) could do the same.

He guessed the chief benefit arising from his prochement, the new governsuccess was to make people a little more skep-tical of accepting something as fact just bement is trying hard strengthen its influence in Army's contingency almost certainly emothers had accepted it as such. Arab Which leads me to the assumption that the have been pulled out for President Bourguiba of Tuthrusts across little redhead has the right idea when he wanders around continually asking "Why?" Greek border and air strikes far and wide over Cyprus itnisia-the first Arab national But that isn't entirely satisfactory, either. One ist leader ever to visit Turkey. In the process a bud-ding Triendship with the israelis who a year ago of the ancients, as I recall it, made a practice Despite the new governof skepticism and kept asking "Why?" almost rightwing flavor, all the signs are that the rap-prochement with Russia, inseemed to be the Turks only Puts

Soviet Education In Period of Change

MOSCOW-Soviet education from kindergarten to college is going through a period of change, some of it traceable to the overthrow of Nikita Khrushchev.

Uncertainty and even some confusion are evident. Authorities admit that many practices are being re-examined

Some of the criticisms have the familiar sound of the occasionally heard in Canada occasionally neart in Canada and the United States where, in recent years, the Soviet educational system has often been cited as a paragon.

One example is a recent editorial in the Communist party newspaper Pravda.

"In the course of the last decades, pedagogical sciences have not kept up with the development of national educa-tion. In the teaching of a numof subjects, there is no reflect tion of the achievements of modern science and technology, and a disproportionate amount of time is devoted to secondary, insignificant ques tions. Pupils are loaded as before with studies."

Problems at the lower end of the system were discussed at a press conference by Anaof education in the big Rus sian Federated Republic, and Alexander Zaporozhets, a leading researcher. Zaporozhets, answering a question, said the school entrance age in the U.S.S.R. will probably be lowered from 7 to 6. knocking a year off the two-year kindergarten program.

He added that he personally wasn't in favor of the change and declared that while time spent in kindergarten would be dut the work would be intensified.

Behind the change is the fact that only a little more than 50 per cent of eligible children in towns in the Rus-sian federation attend kinder-This causes difficulties since grade one is the same for all even though, Zaporozhets said, kindergarten trained students are better prepared, having been taught the rudiments of writing and arithmetic.

One official at the press conference said his five-year-old daughter, attending a kindergarten that specializes in the study of English, can answer 15 questions in that language.

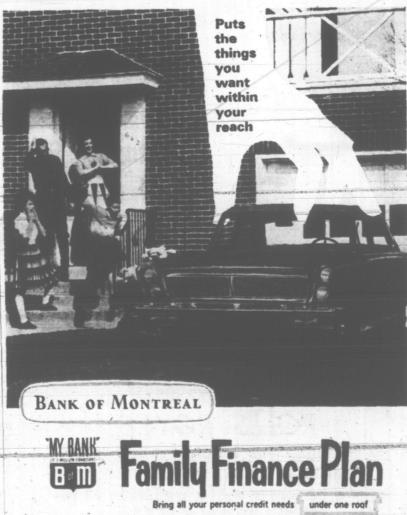

An alternative to shortening the kindergarten period would be to make it compulsory for all but this would require a vast school construction pro-

At a higher level, the number of grades in Soviet schools has been cut back to 10 from 11 where it was set under Khrushchev, who had firm ideas on education as he had on just about every other sub-

Also being abandoned is the Khrushchev - dictated compulsory vocational training for high school students. Critics say the former premier's proposals were unrealistic and just didn't work.

Stiffer demands on university-level science students have been called for by academician G. Petrov, writing in Pravda. Very often, he said, scientific institutes fail to "demand great endeavors from students." One result was that graduates often were assigned to technical work because they could not handle the tasks

Alta. to Build New Railroad To Resources

EDMONTON (CP) - A bill setting up a new railway to open up coal, timber and pulp resources in western Alberta was approved Monday as the legislature prorogued after 38 sitting days.

The bill created a new crown orporation, the Alberta Resources Railway Corporation, which will use govern reserves to finance construc

The railway will start from a point on the Canadian National Railways mainline about 170 miles west of Edmonton and oush northwest into sparselynhabited Rocky Mountain foothills bushland.

DIRECT ACCESS

Eventually it will provide di-rect rail access to Pacific ports for resources in northwestern Alberta and the Northwest Ter-ritories via the CNR mainline.

. The CNR is expected to pur-chase the line outright in the future. Total government investment in the project may reach $40,000,000.

RECORD REVENUES

a significant gain in passenger traffic were reported by the CNR today in its 1964 annual report tabled in the Commons by Transport Minister Pickersgill.

The publicly owned railway system took in $864,200,000 and had an operating surplus of $23,934,000 after expenses and depreciation.

But, as previously announced, it ran up a deficit of $38,726,000 after paying off $62,660,000 in interest on its long-term debt. It was the eighth deficit in a row and the lowest since 1957. Peak loss year was 1960 when it hit $67,497,000.

TRUSTEESHIP SUGGESTED

DANCE McPherson Prices, Policy Blamed for Low Attendance SATURDAY

What is wrong at the Mc-Pherson Playhouse?

Why did Victorians virtually boycott the best shows the the atre had provided in six weeks of operation? And which had been sudsidized by the city for $8,000?

Why is there not more vitality and showmanship in the handling of day-to-day problems?

The answers probably fall into several categories, but most clearly into the realm of simple economics and an inept City Hall policy for management

Remember the opening chorus of Light Up? There's no business like show busi-

There is indeed no business like show business but it is a business just the same, and even more sensitive to the meddling of the uninitated than some others.
From the moment the Mc-Pherson Playhouse opened its doors the city was in show business. And until it forms a trusteeship for the theatre from which a compact, informed management commit tee can be set up to work with the theatre manager, the city will be in trouble.

Show Business

This is the opinion of a city businessman who also happens to be professionally experienced in show business on

Theatre management cannot be tied to the cumbersome bureaucracy of civic govern-

The processes will quickly strangle the theatre where successful operation depends on vitality, imagination, courand sometimes split-second decisions as well as a shrewd understanding of the practical nature of the busi-

Here I quote Norman Israel, business manager of the Seattle Repertory Theatre which in two years has made brilliant progress in its own city and state, if it failed to ring the bell here, which brings me back to my second question, the one that is being mulled over by quite a few people at the Why did Victorians in such large numbers stay away from Seattle Rep shows, Twelfth Night and Ah, Wilder-

Canned Diets

Because they are culturally ead? Because they have lived on too teady a canned diet to enjoy the fresh, invigorating taste of the real thing?

I don't think so. I think the answer comes under three heads, two of which at least are entirely valid.

First, the run of a full week was too long for the audience potential of the Second, there was a definite Twelfth Night on the part of a number of people because of the projected University of Victoria production in July. But the third and biggest factor that has kept people away from such prime attractions as the Seattle Rep, is the ticket price scale.

This is away out of line with the theatre-going public's ability and willingness to pay.

A number of Victorians with basic enthusiasm for live en-tertainment, have taken the trouble to phone me to express their concern in this egard. I have beard from the wife of a university professor, a retired school teacher, a couple of businessmen and some housewives with young fam-

Cross Section

Considered as a cross-section, they represent the major part of Victoria's poten-tial theatre audiences. So why did they stay away?

From the upper-middle income group down to the average. opinions are unani-Ticket prices are too for whom the McPherson Playhouse was presumably created and who in effect, as taxpayers, are the theatre's shareholders.

But at $3 and $4 tops they are being kept out of the Mc-Pherson's good seats and are understandably resistant to the notion of paying $4 to $6 ($2 a ticket plus baby-sitter) for a seat in the upper balcony.

One of my callers who is on the retired list, told me she had seen Stop the World and would dearly loved to have gone to the Seattle Rep shows, but, she said: "At those prices I can only afford about one theatre visit a month."

Some members of the business community however, think too much fuss is being made about losses, real and projected, at too early a stage of proceedings To sum up, they regard the theatre as being like many new businesses which are not expected to show a profit, which in fact lose money until they become established over period of time. With a good management policy a five-year plan could be instituted that might find the theatre at least breaking even at the end of that term, in Mr. Israel's view.

A clear, long-term policy for the McPherson Playhouse seems to be the crux of the situation; a policy to be initiated by the trusteeship and thereafter carried out by the theatre manager without interference.

The issue might as well be squarely faced. The theatre is not going to make a profit for some years, if ever; and if 'no deficit" becomes the major goal in operating the theatre then high ticket prices (and perhaps rising rental scales) will squeeze many citizens out and there will be danger that eventually the Mc-Pherson will degenerate into nothing but a property to be rented to any Tom, Dick or Harry who has the price.

Enjoy Theatre

It is certain that when the late T. S. McPherson gave the theatre to the city it was with the hope that all the citizens who wished to would be able to enjoy its facilities.

Why then should some adamant decision have prevented blocks of seats at nominal cost being made available to specific groups, such as the Veterans' Hospital, nurses, schools and so forth, when it became apparent that less than 100 people would occupy the theatre for Seattle Rep's opening performance? Such a move would have had the effect of reducing the deficit and at the same time of creating good will and a talking campaign that time and again has proved to be the finest form of advertising.

A decision could have been made and action taken with in 12 hours upon being faced with the dismal Monday night bookings.

That nothing was done that such a theatrical faux pas could have been committed makes one ask-are theatre manager Robert El-lison's hands tied somewhere along the line?

Mr. Ellison was appointed to his position on the basis of theatrical management experience, so it seems un-likely that he is to blame for this debacle.

There is not an impresario manager on earth would not sooner completely such a situation to occur as we have witnessed in the Mc-Pherson Playhouse.

Silent riding, total performing... This is the way to drive into Summer!

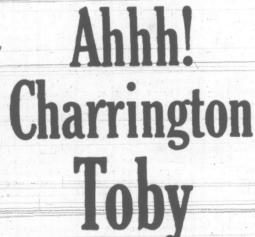

We've put a whole lot of spirit into the new FORDs. Slip into one and you'll discover just how much. There's a thrilling, exciting feeling about it that says it's just rarin' to go. There's a new 240 cu. in. Big Six, standard on all Custom; Custom 500 and Galaxie 500 models. It's more powerful than any other Six in FORD's class. (And even more economical than last year's Six.) And for that exhilarating kind of performance . . . try the 352 cu. in. V-8-standard on sporty Galaxie 500 XL's and luxurious LTD Hardtop-optional on other models. FORD's ride is right in the thoroughbred class. So quiet that everyone's talking about it. And so smooth it's like magic. Big coil springs cushion the bumps and a new body-to-frame mounting system virtually seals you off from shock and vibration. It's the sweetestriding FORD ever! The 3-speed Cruise-O-Matic is FORD's very own. With three forward speeds you have a middle gear that's tailored just right for passing. A gentle "kick-down" will give you extra acceleration whenever you need it. A finger touch on the lever will give you the Second Driving Range-it starts you in the middle gear for a smoother, surer take-off on slippery surfaces. Like we say, we've put a whole lot of spirit in our new FORDs. The kind of spirit you'll enjoy. But we haven't forgotten your comfort. There's more shoulder and knee room, foam cushioned seats and backs, and Silent-Flo ventilation on 4-door hardtops. We've put a lot of improvements into our convertibles as well. The roof locks will snap shut with two fingers, the pliant glass rear window resists scratching and discolouring. And on every model you'll find a bigger, easier to load trunk for the weekend jaunts you'll be enjoying in your new FORD. See your FORD Dealer. Test drive a new FORD very soon. Try a convertible-get the jump on Summer!

Shelburne claims her as "the only female to have this honor in the Dominion." and hasn't been disputed.

Out where the subdivisions continue their relentless march along the peninsula, a quiet war has developed between those who have a view, and less-favored residents whose seascape is year-by-year blocked or at least di-ninished. Many of these last were early comers. They didn't anticipate, when they bought lots and raised houses, that tween them and the saltchuck.

"Now a new subdivision is being built below this street." a writer-in from Cordova Bay, tells me. "Although we were assured by Saanich planning department when we bought our lot on Wesley Road that only one-storey dwellings would be built there—that this applied to the whole hillside now we are told that the builders can put up any type of house they choose in this subdivision.

"I think the planners should take a strong hand so far as view property is concerned, and see to it that trees and houses are kept low.

"Not everyone is fortunate enough to have a front lot, but with a little consideration, we could all enjoy a marvellous view."

That's one opinion, and I don't doubt the prospective builders on the lots below can offer a different slant on the problem. For myself, I can only hope, where Saanich planning is concerned, that it's not another case of too little and too late.

I realize that her sighting was two seasons past, but maybe someone knows where she is now. Hers par golf, was a rare talent exposure that deserved more than ... He did a brief cross-country flicker

So, where is Micheline? Dr. Cary Middlecoff, the dentist who deserted practice among the chopper set for the big green found magazine recently that golf may find itself deep in the rough through overexposure on television. He is very right, for no matter which channel gets attention on weekends, there is always someone seen slamming the pellet.

His points were that too much exposure on TV could dry up golf's golden gusher, as it dried up box-ing's. He also felt a victory in such classics as the U.S. Open, the PGA, or the Masters, is often overrated. But though there is agreement with him on the overexposure opinion, there is also no denying that this past weekend's two-day coverage of the Masters was great television even for the duffer. It had such ingredients as perfection in perform

Letter From Spain For Mrs. Rivard

MONTREAL (CP) - Mrs. Lucien Rivard today showed reporters an envelope bearing a Barcelona, Spain, postmark in which she said she received a second letter from her fugitive husband.

The date and time on the postmark were illegible, but Mrs. Rivard said she received the letter last Thursday. She disclosed the envelope-but not the letter-after The Toronto Telegram reported in a copyrighted story that the wife of the suspected narcotics smuggler had received another letter from her husband.

NORTH VANCOUVER-Three letters were filed Monday at the preliminary hearing of Vancouver public relations man Al Williamson.

Mr. Williamson is charged with forging and uttering Premier W. A. C. Bennett's signature. The letter, signed W. A. C. Bennett, is alleged to be in support of U.S. millionaire Harry Stonehill's application for landed immigrant status.

The other two were signed by Williamson and all were bent to Hal Dornan, aide to Prime Minister Pearson The letters submitted by the Crown read:

The May 4 letter bearing the Bennett signature read:
Thanks for your interest in the settlement of our friend in Canada.

Then, barring an election call, it will be on to the monumental legislative program outlined in the throne

As the Commons continued to churr through the debate Monday, the minority Liberal gov ernment easily turned back another non-confidence motion and heard enough suggestions to fill another throne speech.

The non-confidence motion came from Lucien Plourde (Creditiste—Quebec West) who sought to censure the govern-ment because it did not raise personal income tax exemp-tions to $5,000 for married tax-payers and $2,500 for single per-

The 78 Liberals on hand to oppose the motion drew support from 32 Conservatives, 12 New Democrats, three Social Credit nembers and one independent.

One of the biggest proposals came Monday from Reid Scott (NDP-Toronto Danforth), who asked that all the stops be pulled in a massive assault on the "education crisis of the first magnitude."

LISTS NEEDS

Piecemeal efforts won't do said. This was needed: -Creation of a federal secre-iariat of education to co-ordinate all activities, including the labor market and stu-dent and teacher exchanges. It would all be done by agreement so provincial jurisdiction would be maintained. -Federal grants governing 75 per cent of university construction costs.

-Increasing existing per-capita grants to universities to $3 from $2, with the ultimate aim of eliminating tuition

-A special grant of $1,000,000 annually to be split among the universities of the Maritimes.

-Scholarships and bursaries for university students.

Grants to cover the full cost of university research programs and 75 per cent of technical and vocation train-
